As 2017 comes inexhaustibly to an end we should be thankful for another year which although filled with ups and downs was in the main another successful year with progress made in many areas. As a company we enjoyed an increase in all areas especially functional, technical and solutions based customer interactions. The Australian and New Zealand economies faced real but different economic and political headwinds and while politically New Zealand has stabilized, Australia stills faces a high level of flux and uncertainty. This political uncertainty in Australia is affecting business investment decisions as we've all experienced in 2017.

Healthcare, Food & Beverage as well as specific areas in other Industry Sectors all performed well in 2017 and Spirax continued to support them through trade show, conference and symposium sponsorship as well as maybe even more importantly from an applied knowledge and field operational support perspective.

Energy consumption optimisation and emission reduction programs within the steam loop across multiple industry sectors and customers were our leading successes in 2017 with more to come. These solutions require far more than just products and rely on cooperation and knowledge transfers to generate the best results for everyone.

With oil forecast to enter a rising price cycle in 2018 and reduced electrical capacity versus demand in critical summer and winter periods focusing on energy consumption optimization will rise in importance as 2018 progresses. International agreements on whole of country carbon emission reduction require all industries to increase their focus on process improvements and wherever possible multiple uses of the one energy generation cycle or in steam terms everything from flash recovery, continual steam system audits, correct steam distribution policies and water treatment practices are now a must do. This is a broad scope of needs and very few firms can provide a one-stop shop covering all of these key areas but, well that is just what Spirax Sarco does and has done for over 100 years.

I wish everyone a safe and happy Holiday Season and a great 2018.

Regards,

Justin O'Dowd

From everybody at Spirax Sarco, we wish you
